THE BOMBAY ROYALE

Foxtel Festival Hub

World-conquering originators of vintage Bollywood-inspired surf, spy, disco and funk – one of Melbourne’s most truly unique bands, The Bombay Royale will put on one very special show as part of this year’s Festival.

Conceived by saxophonist Andy Williamson (aka The Skipper), The Bombay Royale originally set out to bring lesser known songs from Bollywood’s golden era of the 60s and 70s to a new audience of Melbourne’s club goers. Five years on, this hugely popular 11-piece group have taken their unique sound to audiences across Australia, Europe and the USA where their performances have been met with critical acclaim.

Their debut album You Me Bullets Love catapulted them on to the world stage, winning a place in iTunes Best of 2012, and #1 on the iTunes World Music charts. The second album, The Island of Dr Electrico, heralds the exhilarating return of this joyous musical outfit.

Their live shows are filled with colour, outrageous costumes, irresistible dance moves and a madcap mix of intoxicating rhythms. Each band member assumes an iconic Bollywood movie persona with Parvin Kaur Singh, aka The Tiger and Shourov Bhattacharya, aka The Lady fronting the group singing in Hindi, Bengali and other languages.

They have played everywhere from Glastonbury to GlobalFest, and this October sees Melbourne’s favourite music melting pot get the stage all to themselves at the Foxtel Festival Hub.
